

1. View from Reconciliation aboretum looking south

Walking experience

Places for contemplation and resting

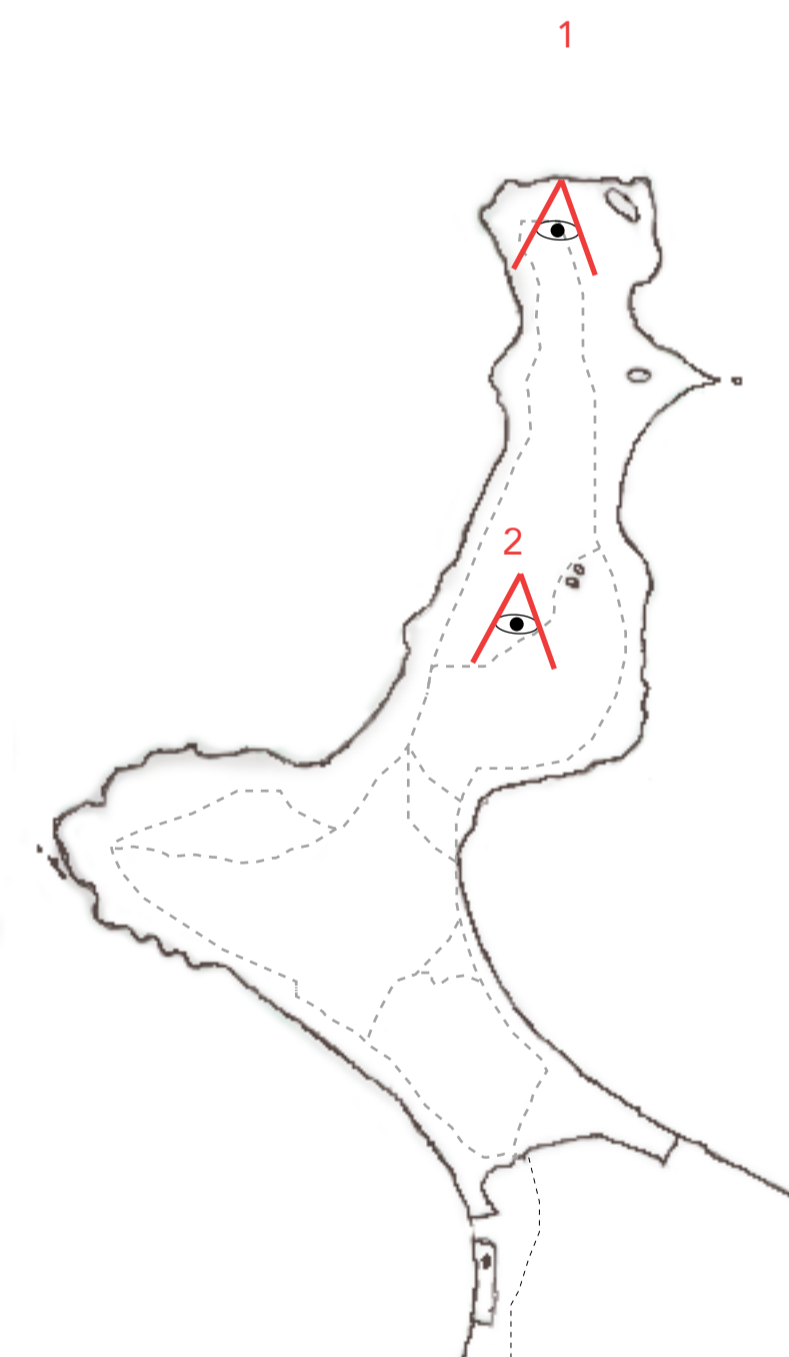

Part of Re-imagining Arm End is to preserve the walking experience that most people currently enjoy. Revegetation is proposed to have minimal impact on the walker's enjoyment of the reserve, while rehabilitating native vegetation and protecting the natural and cultural values. There will be low level improvements to tracks and infrastructure. A ridgeline track will extend from the southern ridgeline to the northern ridgeline running above Mary Ann Bay to enable magnificent views encompassing views to Mt Wellington/kunyani, Ralphs Bay and Betsy Island.

Places for contemplation and resting

A clearing in the casuarinas at Gellibrand Point will create a sense of shelter and refuge

Art experience

- An art/landscape design plan and overlay for curated installations and temporary artworks
- Will enhance the appreciation of Arm End Reserve and develop a sense of place

KEY TO VIEWS

2. Clearing at Gellibrand Point